

RAEVSKAIA, Irina. Republica Moldova—gradul de risc al țării ca națiune agregată determinată de agențiile internaționale de rating . In: Paradigme moderne în dezvoltarea economiei naționale și mondiale. 30-31 octombrie 2020, Chisinău. Chișinău: Centrul Editorial-Poligrafic al USM, 2020, pp. 419 - 426. ISBN 978-9975-152-69-3.

In the current context marked by the consolidation of democratic processes in society, structural transformations in the economy, increasing the internationalization of socio-economic and political life, deepening interstate economic interference and simultaneously increasing risks and threats objectively requires the development and implementation of a compliant system. , and favorable to ensure national and economic security, and the issue of ensuring economic security becomes a primary task of economic policies and development strategy of the national economy. National security is in itself a multidimensional system expressed in a set of concepts, legal norms, actions of state bodies aimed at promoting and protecting national interests; identifying, preventing and counteracting risks, threats to the security of the state and society. Economic security is ensured by implementing state economic policies aimed at mitigating internal and external threats, reducing risks, ensuring the sustainable development of society, competitiveness of domestic goods in foreign markets, which indicates that ensuring economic security is a particularly acute and priority issue. for all authorized state bodies.